

There are 20 County Re-Entry Task Forces across New York State

County Re-Entry Task Forces (CRTFs) are located in New York City and upstate counties and are designed to help individuals who are returning to their communities after release from state prison. Two state agencies – the Division of Criminal Justice Services (DCJS) and Department of Corrections and Community Supervision (DOCCS) – collaborate to support the CRTFs.

Each CRTF works with DCJS, DOCCS, county and community agencies, and human service providers to help eligible individuals get programs and services that meet their needs when returning to the community.

The CRTF in your community may be able to help you:

- Find services to promote your growth and positive behavior
- Find a job and/or a place to live
- Obtain a non-driver's license or other ID
- Reconnect with family and community

Re-entry service coordination may help you meet parole conditions and access other services and support, including:

Employment

CRTFs can provide assistance with writing resumes, developing interview skills, obtaining job counseling and finding a part-time or full-time job.

Housing

CRTFs assist with obtaining transitional, temporary or permanent housing.

Cognitive Behavioral Programs

CRTFs have trained staff to help provide these programs, which are designed to help change negative thinking and reduce your risk of committing a new crime.

Substance Use Treatment

CRTFs work with alcohol and substance use service providers who can help you get needed treatment.

Education/Training

CRTFs can place you in high school equivalency programs, adult education, vocational training or college prep courses.

CRTFs can help:

- Moderate- to high-risk individuals assessed as Supervision Level 1, 2 or 3 by DOCCS.
- Individuals who are designated Supervision Level 4 who meet the following criteria:
  - Women with high service needs.
  - Individuals who have been released after being incarcerated for more than 10 years.

- Teens and young adults recently released from an Office of Children and Family Services (OCFS) residential facility, or on parole
- Individuals with mental illness, severe medical issues, developmental disabilities, and those with hearing, visual or physical impairments.
- Individuals with substance use disorders.
- Individuals who have violated parole and have been re-released.
- Individuals who served their entire sentence and are released from state incarceration without supervision (maximum expiration) or are currently not under parole supervision but have served time in a state correctional facility in the past.

For more information:

Discuss your eligibility for assistance from the CRTF in your community with your Offender Rehabilitation Counselor or assigned parole officer.

If you will not be on parole supervision upon release, you may directly contact the CRTF in your community for assistance.

Freddy returned home after serving 24 years in state prison. He credits the support and services he received through the County Re-Entry Task Force in his community for making that transition successful.

“ So, for anyone wondering if the Re-Entry Task Force actually helps? Yes. It basically saved my life and for that, I will be forever grateful.”
